The Illinois Election.

The latest returns from the Illinois constitutional election indicate the defeat of the new Constitution. The north and center have voted strongly against it, while the few counties in the south which have been heard from, do not give as large majorities as expected. The Tribune says, "if any thing the doubt is rather cleared up on the side of the positive defeat of the Egyptian swindle."

The Failure to Capture Jackson, and the Cause of It.

It is now said that McClellan has been ordered to reinforce McDowell before Richmond. If he does not succeed better in this movement, than in the abortive attempt to assist Fremont and Banks, such an order will not amount to much. Why not increase the number of troops under Fremont to give him an effective force, and threaten Richmond in the rear, cutting off the supplies of the enemy? This is the movement which they most fear. It is also said that Fremont has been obliged to abandon his advance towards Staunton on account of deficient commissary supplies, and the small number of troops under his command, and that he has fallen back a few miles to Harrisonburg. In relation to this matter, the correspondent of the New York Times, writing from the headquarters of Fremont's army, June 11th, says:

It seems to be well established that Jackson has been reinforced by Longstreet and Smith. Any way, if Shields, as rumor says, has been ordered back, we have done the wisest thing possible in falling back to Harrisonburg. The river is fordable below, and we might have formed a large tactical force to our rear, and our supplies cut off at an inconvenient moment. There has been had generalship somewhere in permitting Jackson to escape, but it does not rest with this department. Three large and well-appointed divisions were brought from Fredericksburg, expressly to put upon his track. Only a fragment of one has been heard from. Where are the other two? Fremont has chased him with untiring energy, and though he every time he came up with him. That we did not annihilate him is less wonderful than that he did not turn and annihilate us, inasmuch as he had the balance of power. We have marched our men without rations and without tents; we have built bridges where bridges were burnt, and constructed roads where before there were none. The junction which our forces were to have formed with ours has in no case been effected; the expected reinforcements did not come up, but still we maintained our position. That we have not retreated this road earlier, in some confusion, may be explained by the fact that the popular idea has doubled—yes, more than doubled the actual force under Fremont's command. If I am not disposed to be argumentative, but if after this valley chase of a mountain fox, who, when occasion demands, takes out the whorl of his skin with the lion's, any of Fremont's foes come howling on his track, I shall make a few facts public, even at the risk of incurring a mild reproof from Secretary Stanton.

A correspondent of the New York Tribune says:

It would not be wise, and perhaps no lending paper in the country would publish at this moment all the reasons why 70,000 men, moving from different points, were not able to overtake and utterly crush this, the most brilliant and audacious of the rebel generals. But some of the reasons are so glaring and simple in their nature, as to require no elaborate explanation, and need to be remedied instantly, that your correspondent has been requested by officers occupying high positions in the army to give them publicity. And first, it is known that railroad, to great extent, have been relied upon in the eastern department for the transportation of commissary and quartermaster's stores, and in cases of sudden emergency, for troops. The road running from Alexandria to the Valley of the Shenandoah has within the past two weeks been taxed to its utmost capacity for this purpose. The government, as I have been informed, contracted and paid for first-class locomotives and cars—i. e., in strength and all the qualities requisite for the work required—and has had palmed off upon it engines and cars which no road in the country with any standing in Wall street, would run for a moment. Hardly a train has passed from Alexandria to Manassas, or from Manassas to Front Royal, without breaking down, since the moving of the Army of the Rappahannock to the Valley of the Shenandoah commenced. Poor old engines, wheezing and puffing with three or four cars behind them, could be seen all along the road, and, like broken-down cavalry horses, require the tenderest treatment to get along at all. Cars with rotten platforms, wheels full of old cracks, boilers which could stand hardly an ounce of steam, breaks with rusty chains, and most atrocious contrivances to get it in motion, and all the appurtenances of both engines and cars in such a damaged condition that a soldier or citizen would much rather walk to the cannon's mouth amid the hottest fire, than risk a day's journey on the rickety old affairs. Your correspondent is not exaggerating the condition of these trains in the least; but has had his attention so frequently called to it that he cannot refrain from stating the simple facts. The superintendent of the road is said to be a man of the strictest integrity and of great energy, and endeavors to do the best he can with the material at his disposal. The fault is probably with the cursed contractors, who should be made to ride along with the trains, and one of them hung upon the occurrence of each accident.

A large number of soldiers told me they had spent their month's pay in less than a week, in obtaining food from the citizens of Front Royal and from the sutlers. When

A correspondent of the Philadelphia Press, writing from Front Royal, June 7th, says:

My object in writing this letter is to let the loyal people of the country, and the authorities at Washington know that there is a few seces somewhere in this (General McDowell's) department, and I am responsible for all I say.

After forced marches, and about half rations, we arrived here last Saturday evening. On said day we marched over twenty-two miles, over terrible roads and through a violent northeast storm. On Sunday we (Gen. Hartshorn's brigade, Ord's division,) moved to a camp-ground near the Shenandoah bridge, where we remained until Monday, when we crossed the river and marched to within the miles of Strasburg. It was generally believed that on Sunday we would meet Jackson's army and win a glorious victory, but we moved slowly, and Jackson passed up the north fork on the same day, out of our reach, when some of his forces were met by Fremont's army, I believe, and some cannon and prisoners taken. Gen. Shields also captured a portion of Jackson's wagon train the day before.

We encamped in a swampy grove for a day or two (near Strasburg), when the fresh-cut swept away a bridge above, cutting off our communication with Strasburg. We then made a hasty retreat, day before yesterday, back to Front Royal. On the same night both the turnpike and railroad bridges were carried away. Our retreat was therefore forced.

During the week our men suffered severely. I never knew before what it was to be without shelter for days and nights in a terrible storm, without food, and without the means to procure it. Men and horses were completely exhausted.

Although the storm is over now, the sun shining, and everything assuming a cheerful appearance, we are even yet unable to procure the necessities of life for man and beast, while there is plenty here belonging to the rebels in arms, carefully guarded by our own men, but no one permitted to take a particle! I do know where there is a commissary store belonging to the rebels, very near our late camping grounds, with corn, bacon, &c., which our commissaries were not permitted to touch, but which was carefully guarded by our own soldiers, while our division was in great danger of mutiny by reason of starvation! Rebel corn can be procured here in abundance, and also bacon, flour, &c. Yet our orders are that it shall not be touched!

The Maryland Resolutions.

The Maryland resolutions adopted by our assembly, by the vote of the democrats of that body, and one pretended republican assume that the agitation of slavery, north and south, is the cause of the rebellion; and, by consequence, it follows that those who have resisted the extension of slavery into new territories, and who have objected to being made slave catchers by the infamous fugitive slave law imposed upon the nation by pro-slavery demagogues, north and south, are as guilty as the rebels in arms. When Missouri compromises, Taconton constitutions and Dred Scott decisions are thrust upon an unwilling people; if they oppose them, they, and not the authors of these measures are declared guilty of the agitation of slavery! The originators of these crimes against liberty, when opposed and beaten in their schemes, in a perfectly constitutional way, rebel and levy war upon the nation, but the guilt of the rebellion is attempted to be cast from their shoulders upon those who would not submit to sacrifice conscience and honor, by remaining silent.

If the Missouri compromises had not been repealed, would any discussion have taken place on the subject of slavery? Even the Douglas men would not submit to the Lecompton constitution. They still further agitated and irritated these rebels on that subject, when they refused in the Charleston Convention to accept all that was demanded of them in relation to slavery, and preferred to divide their party, rather than debate themselves utterly, by yielding to all the inordinate demands of the south. Was this not a strong agitation of the delicate subject which these Maryland resolutions so impudently deprecate?

The greatest agitators are the slaveholders themselves and their northern allies. While deprecating the discussion of slavery, they continually broach it, in and out of Congress. They cast mud in the stream, and then indignantly demand that their neighbor below shall stop riling the water! What are Richardson, Ben Wood, Powell, Vallandigham and Cox talking about continually but this very subject? What does Sax Clark want but "agitation" when he proposes black laws for Wisconsin? And what but agitation can come from the presentation of resolutions from disloyal Maryland, casting reflections upon loyal men in the north? These resolutions will stir up strife and bitterness, rather than allay irritation, and we believe they are intended for that very purpose by the treason plotters of Maryland, and their dupes and sympathizers in Wisconsin.

CHARGES AGAINST PIERRE SOULE.—The charges upon which, Pierre Soule, of New Orleans, was arrested by General Butler are, first, that he is the leader of a secret society, known as the "Southern Independence Association," of which each member is solemnly sworn to oppose, at the cost of his life, if necessary, the reconstruction of the old Union, no matter what disaster may befall the confederate cause, and to aid, by armed forces, if required, the confederate government in carrying out its laws for the confiscation of the property of union men, and in the detection and punishment or expulsion of people whom they may regard as spies. The second charge is that Mr. Soule was the author of the insolent letter sent by the late Mayor to Commodore Farragut, and is the principal supporter of the rebellion in New Orleans.

General Butler has inaugurated a much-needed work in New Orleans. The first military execution in the city since the late war has been that of a rebel who violated the laws of justice for the six prisoners of war who violated their parole, and commenced the organization of a company with the purpose of forcing our pickets and joining Beauregard.

Last Night's Report.

WASHINGTON, June 19.

According to a general order just published, furloughs will not be given by captains of companies, or a furlough from such authority will not relieve a soldier from the charge of desertion.

CAIRO, June 19.

The work on the Mobile & Ohio railroad from Grand Junction to Columbus is progressing rapidly. The road would have been running this week, but for the burning of a bridge 150 feet in length, near Trenton, by the rebels, which has delayed the work. The gunboat Sterling Price arrived to-night.

NASHVILLE, June 19.

The Nashville Union learns that 15,000 men will be raised for service in Tennessee. Several leading Unionists are engaged in the work.

DISPATCHES FROM GEN. MORGAN to Gov. Johnson state that a meeting has been held in Smith, DeKalb and Gil counties.

CAIRO, June 19.

Special to Chicago Tribune.—There is no change in the position of affairs at Corinth. The commander-in-chief still remains at his headquarters in that city, and the army is as far from achieving a victory over the retreating rebels, as it was the day after the occupation. Communications between Memphis and Corinth remain unbroken, and dispatches pass daily from the gunboat fleet and the generals at Bolivar and Jackson.

It is said, with how much truth I know not, that Col. Slack is superceded as the military governor of Memphis.

Nothing has been heard from White River later than the intelligence dispatched yesterday.

The repairs on the Mound City hospital are completed. It has now the capacity to accommodate 1,000 patients.

The cars are running between Columbus and Union City, the repair on the road having been completed. Gen. Dodge commands at Columbus. All quiet in northern Tennessee.

Michael Donovan, a deserter from the confederate army, who on the 14th of June took the oath of allegiance at Memphis, was arrested at day at Mound City, on the affidavit of G. G. Buxsey, who swears that he killed $100 if he (Buxsey) would aid in killing one Johnson Brown of Mound City, formerly a federal scout, in the employ of the government anterior to the evacuation of Columbus. Donovan after his arrest said he owned two stalls in the New Orleans market, and was a man of considerable property. Brown's scalp was considerably valued by the confederates, $1,000 having been repeatedly offered for it. Donovan, with a bright outlook for the main chance, proposed to sublet the contract for $100 and pocket a handsome profit for these war times.

The race is undoubtedly a spy of the first water and deserveth to die upon nothing with the bottom knocked out. He was remanded to the guard house and accommodated with the historical chain and ball.

WASHINGTON, June 19.

Special to Chicago Times.—The deepest interest continues to be manifested on the Illinois election. Members of congress are unable to obtain any definite news, and the result is much in doubt among them.

The report of the committee on confiscation takes the ground that the bill provides for the freeing or confiscation of persons held to service, and that, to be confiscated, slaves must be property, which the bill as passed does not recognize.

The Vice President left Washington today, not to return again this session. Persons from the Shenandoah valley state that the story that Gen. Jackson has been reinforced is false, though they add that, as a precaution, Fremont has taken up a strong position.

The bill reported in the House today provides for the establishment of a foundry at Chicago, and navy yards and naval depots on Lakes Erie, Ontario, and Erie. It appropriates $200,000 for the foundry, and $100,000 each for the yards on Lakes Erie and Michigan, and $50,000 for the yard on Lake Ontario. It also provides for the appointment of commissioners to select sites.

MOUNT JACKSON, June 16.

Reliable information has been received at headquarters that Jackson has been reinforced a second time by 12,000 men. Gen. Fremont is in a very exposed condition, and in danger of being overwhelmed by a vastly superior force. No reinforcements are on their way to him. It is believed that much of the Corinth army is about to be sent to hold the Shenandoah valley, with its immense supplies of wheat until after harvest time.

WINCHESTER, June 14.

There is nothing worthy of note transpiring here at present, but we have a multitude of rumors in regard to Gen. Fremont's army. The latest report, coming through a rebel channel to Strasburg, is that Jackson has fallen back to some defensible point, where he has been reinforced by 70,000 men, 10,000 of whom he would employ to keep Fremont engaged while the remainder were to march down the valley west of North Mountain, cut Fremont off, and sweep him from the valley. The mail messenger from Gen. Fremont's army to Strasburg reports that fighting was continued between the two armies on Monday and Tuesday, and another rider says that Fremont has fallen back to Harrisonburg.

The reports of Jackson's reinforcements and his designs are discredited here. A large portion of the prisoners carried off by Jackson have effected their escape.

The report that 1,500 to 2,000 rebel prisoners are now en route from Fremont's division is not confirmed at headquarters.
